

Assistant Professor of Practice in Media Production

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Journalism and Mass Communications is seeking an assistant professor of practice in media production to join our award-winning program starting in January 2023. The responsibilities of this position will include teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in media production; coordinating a student-run photo, video production and live streaming agency; contributing to the development of our curriculum; providing service to the college, university and profession; and other assigned duties.

The successful candidate will have a master's degree in broadcasting, advertising and public relations, journalism, mass communications or a closely related field. Preferred qualifications include expertise in video production.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Journalism and Mass Communications is accredited by the ACEJMC and offers majors in advertising and public relations, broadcasting, journalism and sports media and communication. We create a student-centered environment providing hands-on experiences to enhance learning outcomes. Students are successful in national competitions, collaborate on research and complete internships with recognized agencies and companies in leading markets.

Employment begins in January 2023. Review of applications will begin October 1, 2022 and continue until the position is filled or the search is closed. To be considered for the position, go to <https://employment.unl.edu>, requisition F_220120 and click "Apply to this job." Complete the information form and attach a letter of application; a detailed curriculum vita that includes information on education, experience and qualifications; and a list of three references with complete contact information.
